The Rainbow Fund 5764 – Sustaining Our Community

The Rainbow Fund 5764 asked members of Sha'ar Zahav what they value about our community. Member Terry Fletcher reflected on her own experience and interviewed other CSZ members who gave and received bikkur cholim this past year:

Terry Fletcher:

When I was going through chemotherapy, CSZniks supported me in so many ways! One of my only fond memories of my chemotherapy treatments was Nicole Bloom and me filling the chemo treatment area with Hebrew songs as I was getting my infusion.

Barbara Cymrot:

Providing bikkur cholim is fun – you really get to know people's personalities. And the recipients are just incredibly grateful. I'm happy I found a community to do this with. I'm proud that we're part of that sea of humanity that does things for people, that we've joined that world that sees that as a value.

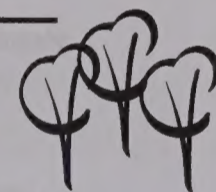

Phyllis Mintzer:

After I had my second surgery, I had a dream. I felt like I was floating down a very turbulent river on a raft that was being tossed around. And then in my dream hands appeared from everywhere and they steadied the raft. The raft went over a big cataract and didn't tip over because of all the hands. And that's what the Sha'ar Zahav community is. It steadies the raft that we're all on. Bikkur cholim enables George and me to live within the framework of a community instead of a framework of being ill. It's been a network that not only has helped us physically, but has really enriched our lives.

Steve Mazer

"Kol Yisrael achra'I zeh l'zeh" – all of Israel is responsible for one another. It is an important obligation and a wonderful privilege to support members of one's community. We are a caring community and have a tremendous capacity to rally together and support those in need.

Tu Bishvat Community Planting and Shabbat Service

Saturday, February 7, 10 am - noon
Bernal Heights Park

Celebrate the earth on Tu Bishvat by planting and davening with CSZ on Bernal Hill. Rabbi Angel and the students of Kadimah will lead us in a festive Shabbat service focused on the environment followed by planting with the San Francisco Recreation and Park Department. It's a time to marvel at the green restoration of our beautiful hills, get your hands dirty and do a mitzvah for the earth.

Prepare to plant by wearing clothes and shoes you can get dirty, sun or rain gear and gloves if you have them. Don't forget to bring water and snacks. Be advised that the hill is steep. People with mobility issues will be challenged and young children will require careful supervision.

Meet at 10 am on the southwestern side of the hill at the end of Bernal Heights Blvd. by the white gate. There is some parking available at the dead end of the street. Other parking is available on adjacent neighborhood streets. Contact Sue (415/861-6932 x302 or educator@shaarzahav.org) for a map and more information.

Heavy rain and/or winds will move us to CSZ to join the regularly scheduled Shabbat morning service coupled with an indoor planting project.

From Rabbi Angel's Study Text I: A Parable

The ancient rabbis were sitting, composing what they called a Talmud. A question arose: How should we read the Torah? Is it best to understand it literally, heeding the command of every detail, or is there room for flexibility in interpretation? Before them the rabbis had records of earlier, more authoritative teachings, some of which supported one view and some another. What should they do? How should the Torah be read?

Their ruling came down: "It is a dispute of tannaitic sages," they said. This dispute would stand. No ultimate decision would be made. (see Talmud Bavli, Sanhedrin 45b)

Last year it was my great joy to bring you Rabbi Benay Lappe as our Scholar-in-Residence. This year, due to popular request, Rabbi Lappe returns to us February 20-22 for what promises to be another five-star CSZ event – not to mention a watershed moment in the history of gay and lesbian Jews. For we are among the very first people in all of Jewish history, who gather unabashedly bringing our inimitably gay and lesbian experience and perspective to the sacred texts of our tradition.

After Rabbi Lappe's visit last year, Benay left incredibly energized by our conversations and insights. Back in Chicago, she set to work to create SVARA. In her own words, "SVARA is a pluralist, non-hetero-normative, traditionally radical yeshiva dedicated to engaging queer Jews and straight allies in the serious study of Talmud as a spiritual practice. Study is text-based, participatory and always stimulating challenging and exciting.

"SVARA is the only institution of its kind providing the necessary text skills and halachic (Jewish legal) expertise to Jews whose life experiences, insights and critique have yet to be included in the Jewish communal and halachic conversation, yet are so crucial for the health of the Jewish community and the continuing evolution of the Jewish tradition."

A chief influence in Rabbi Lappe's work is her former professor at The Jewish Theological Seminary, Rabbi David Kraemer. In his book Reading the Rabbis he writes, "The choice of one lens or another has important consequences. The meaning of a text – what it has to say to us, what it demands of us – will be profoundly affected by this choice. Yet we need not decide upon a single lens, a single approach to reading. On the contrary, we should live with indecision and, as did the Talmudic rabbis, even respect it. Our various readings, side by side, will enrich our understanding and appreciation of the text at hand."

To borrow from a well-known Talmudic maxim: "The rest is commentary; come let us study" and create a lasting commentary. I hope each and every one of you will want to take part in this extraordinary project.

Choices and Blessings

In December, CSZ Treasurer Karen Schiller and I led a Town Hall meeting to discuss the congregation's financial situation. We had a nice turnout for a Wednesday evening discussion about finances, but as with most Town Hall type meetings, the vast majority of CSZ congregants were not there. I'd like to use this month's column to get the message out to a wider audience about some of what was discussed that night, as well as to give you a sense of a few critical issues that will be on the Va'ad's agenda in the coming months. Also, by the time you read this, the materials that were distributed at the Town Hall meeting should have been made available to you electronically. Printed copies are also available through the CSZ office.

The current group of Officers and Va'ad members has been meeting since July 2003. It became clear after several months that the budget for this year that had been approved at the May 2003 Congregational Meeting was going to need to be substantially revised. A significant deficit would develop if we did not both alter the expense budget as well as execute better on our fundraising objectives. The Va'ad has acted to understand these financial challenges, and to make appropriate choices. At the Town Hall meeting, we described more than $150,000 in expense reductions that the Va'ad has approved for the current fiscal year. These include a smaller professional staff, as well as a multitude of cuts we are making on the non-personnel side of the budget. In the personnel area, we chose not fill the membership assistant position this year, and to forego hiring an executive director for the remainder of this year. We have also reduced from 20 to 10 the number of hours per week that our wonderful program director, Melanie Kushnir, will be working. I want to thank Melanie for all her efforts and for the positive attitude with which she has accepted this change.

Attendees at the Town Hall meeting also got a brief preview of the Rainbow Fund, our new annual campaign being led so ably by Marianne Balin and Tony Harris. By now, many of you have been asked to work on the campaign and contribute. I want to thank you, and to acknowledge the remarkable generosity of our community.

What comes next? First, as is our tradition, the budget for the fiscal year beginning July 2004 will be presented and discussed at both the March and April Va'ad meetings. It is our goal to develop as strong, sound and realistic a budget proposal as possible. Second, I can report to you that the Dues Committee, chaired by Tiela Chalmers, has been working for several months now on an assessment of our dues policy, which has not been changed in a major way since 1995. I expect that the committee will bring a preliminary proposal to the February Va'ad meeting. Should the Va'ad endorse a change to our dues structure, we will create a variety of forums for congregational discussion and feedback well in advance of the May Congregational Meeting. Lastly, the Long Range Planning Committee, chaired by Claudia Bernard and Geoff Benjamin, is soon to conclude its work.

Our financial situation is forcing us to make choices, often difficult ones. But we see that out of these choices arise hidden blessings. We see members of our staff rising to the challenge of new responsibilities. We see leaders raising their hands to take on difficult challenges, in such complex areas as fundraising, dues policy, and expense control. We see members of the congregation stepping up to coordinate events and programs. And rather than save money by publishing our beloved newsletter less frequently, a group of talented members is leading us into the electronic era. All in all, we learn to appreciate even more that which we have, and we see that it is enough. And that by coming together in community, we can make it more than enough. Dayenu.

Bat Mitzvah of Charlotte Halloran-Couch

On Saturday, February 14 (Parashat Yitro), Charlotte Halloran-Couch will be called to the Torah as a Bat Mitzvah.

Charlotte is an eighth grade student at Martin Luther King Middle School in Berkeley. She says she likes Berkeley's liberal politics. Her favorite school subjects are English and history. She likes writing; she is currently writing an adventure story influenced by Lord of the Rings. She also enjoys reading, nature, riding her bike (a ten-minute ride to school) and baking (especially cookies).

Charlotte has been preparing for her Bat Mitzvah for about a year, on both sides of the Bay. In the East Bay, she has learned the prayers from Reuben Zellman, whose sense of humor she likes. In San Francisco, she has studied prayerbook Hebrew and grammar (how to conjugate verbs) with her mentor, Rabbi Yoel Kahn.

What does her Bat Mitzvah mean to her? Charlotte said she definitely wants to keep learning about Judaism. She will be turning more to community service now. For example, she is participating in a tree planting. Charlotte says she will "contemplate religion and what it means to me," thinking of "God as the world as a whole."

Charlotte would like to thank Phyllis Mintzer, who has encouraged discussion and arguing different opinions. Also, she thanks "Yoey, of course, for helping me work on my drash." She thanks Reuben Zellman and all her teachers. Finally, she thanks her parents for "keeping me going and making sure I do all the things I need to do for the Bat Mitzvah," including practicing her cantillation, reading her Torah portion, and doing her Hebrew homework.

Kadimah Class

Spotlight: Kitah Hey

Covering everything from questions about Abraham's archaic method of sending for a wife for Isaac to musings about the virtues of Rebecca to midrash on the emotional experiences of all of these biblical characters, Kitah Hey presented an amazing patchwork drash on Hayyei Sarah at Kadimah-led services on November 22. This kind of textual analysis is the core of their learning this year. Kitah Hey students (5th and 6th grade) study key parashot of the Torah along with centuries of Jewish commentary, learning along the way key commentators and, more importantly, how to add their own voices to our ever-evolving tradition. On Shabbat, they are led in their studies by third year Kadimah teacher Micah Morris, who sparks their textual exploration by presenting many new lenses through which to examine the text.

Kitah Hey students presented another collection of textual interpretations in a round-robin of board games they created using the prayers of the Shema. Having studied with Rabbi Angel and teacher Mira Waser the architecture of this core element of the service – moving from the Barchu through to the Ge'ulah, students were given the assignment to work with a parent making a game using each liturgical element. The results were a wide array of innovative games requiring players to recite portions of the prayers, translate words, practice Hebrew reading and in one case, buy prayer properties. In addition to learning and understanding individual prayers and their relationships to one another in the liturgy, Kitah Hey students spend their Wednesday afternoons practicing Hebrew reading, expanding their vocabularies and studying key grammatical concepts.

At the end of the year, Kitah Hey students will be well equipped with the Hebrew and text skills necessary to begin the intensive study leading them to their bnei mitzvah.

Social Action Connection

by Susan Lubeck, co-chair

Thank You

To AJ Turpen-Fried, outgoing co-chair of the Social Action Committee (see box).

To Allan Berenstein and Laura Lowe for co-organizing this year's volunteer relief at Project Open Hand.

To Sarita Groisser and Richard Weiner for co-organizing the December showing of It is No Dream about Israeli peace activists. The turnout of forty people exceeded expectations and was followed by a thoughtful discussion facilitated by Susan Colson. Thank you, Susan, for volunteering your time.

To all our volunteers who relieved regular Open Hand volunteers on December 24 and 25.

AJ Turpen-Fried

For two and a half years, AJ has brought his considerable commitment, compassion and consistency to tikkun olam at CSZ. He initiated several new programs, including the monthly Shabbat service at the Jewish Home for the Aged, periodic visits to prisoners, educational panels on trans and bisexual issues and on the history of activism at Sha'ar Zahav. He also initiated our most long-standing effort, the collaboration with Most Holy Redeemer parish to serve dinner to and eat with homeless neighbors on Wednesday nights. He continues to be involved in our exploration of faith-based community organizing and other social action efforts, as well as working with students in Kadimah and serving on the CEB. Thank you AJ.

Project Open Hand for the Holidays: A Roaring Success!

It is so wonderful to be able to report that this year we filled all but one slot for our annual takeover of Project Open Hand for the holidays. Project Open Hand prepares and delivers hot meals and groceries to clients with HIV disease and other illnesses that make it difficult for the recipient to cook for him or herself. The clients receive meals every day of the year.

Every year Sha'ar Zahav and JFCS volunteers step in to fill all of the usual volunteer spots for Christmas Eve and Christmas day. Our assistance allows Project Open Hand to prepare and deliver meals even though the regular volunteers are out of town or spending Christmas with their families.

The morning brought lots and lots of vegetables that needed chopping, peeling and julienning. We even chopped the dreaded onions! The next shift staffed the conveyor belt. Containers went by and food went in. Finally our teams of volunteers showed up to deliver the meals to all of the clients who receive hot meals every day.

Thanks to everyone who participated. We really appreciate how easy you make it for those of us who help to organize this undertaking. We look forward to next year.

From the Editor

As the new editor for the JGF, I want to take a moment and acknowledge several people who over the years have contributed to our community.

Roslyn Fuerman worked "behind the scenes" for the JGF as Advertising Coordinator. Roslyn resigned her position in December. With her keen eye, creativeness and strong customer service skills Roslyn assured that the JGF advertisers requirements were met and exceeded over the years. Thank you.

Batya Kalis graciously welcomed me as a new editor and now that I have gotten my feet on the ground has decided to resign. Batya has been a member of the Newsletter Committee for several years and many editors. Batya's knowledge of the community and sense of history has enriched everyone who has read JGF. A deep felt thanks to Batya.

Karen Schiller was editor of the JGF for three years and now is treasurer of the shul. Karen passed "the torch" of editing to me offering gentle words of guidance and support. For this I am truly grateful. Thank you Karen for all of your contributions during the years and for ushering us into the electronic age.
